

 Read Message

  Back to: Inbox

From:

Date: 2006/07/29 Sat AM 10:57:56 CST

To: &lt;pa-consultation@cab.gov.hk&gt;

Subject: PA-consultation

    Move To: (Choose Folder)

I have no time and not interested in knowing what the government proposal is. I have an impression that whatever the proposal, the taxpayers are always the losers.

The government appears not to know what the outside is and always asks for more and refuses to control the expenditure, and when budget problem arises, says that we have "structural deficits" and propose a new tax – VAT.

My questions are:

1. Does every taxpayer have solid and substantial increase in income to guarantee the government to ask for more? A month ago, the strike of the bus drivers only result in increase of salary in a hundred or a bit more.
2. The government did promise to control her budget and not blooming in the structure of the civil servants endlessly, are you now stop doing that? Is the government's efficiency not benefited from the office automation as other private sections, the telecommunication of example, to allow staff cut rather than increase.
3. Is the proposal just as a tool to please those political parties in friendship to ask them to support government's proposals.

Rgds

    Move To: (Choose Folder)

   Back to: Inbox
Help

(Name provided)

(Editor's Note: The sender requested anonymity.)