

Freedom of expression protected

The Hong Kong Special Administrative Region Government is firmly committed to protecting the freedom of expression and maintaining a free press in Hong Kong, a Government spokesman said today (July 17).

"The freedom of expression and the freedom of the press are constitutionally protected under Chapter III of the Basic Law and also protected by the Hong Kong Bill of Rights. They are fundamental rights enjoyed by all people in Hong Kong," the spokesman said.